Dog days of summer

The phrase 'dogs days of summer' used to refer to sweltering summer days has more to do with the stars than dogs. The Roman's 'dies caniculares' began towards the end of July when the star Sirius (known as the Dog Star) began to rise in the sky just before the Sun. The star was so bright that the Romans believed it gave extra heat to the sun and was responsible for hot days in summer.

It's the most thundery time of the year

More thunderstorms occur during the summer than at any other time of the year. The warmth of summer often provides the perfect conditions of rising air and moisture required for the creation of thunderstorms.

Crickets get chirpy

Crickets chirp faster in warmer temperatures because their muscles contract more quickly and their bodies have more energy. This relationship between air temperature and cricket chirping rate is known as Dolbear's Law. In theory, you can estimate the temperature by counting the number of chirps a cricket makes in a given amount of time and then applying a formula:

Count the number of chirps in 14 seconds and add 40 to the total.

For example:
30 chirps + 40 = 70° F.

Keep in mind that crickets usually don't chirp when the temperature is below 55° F or above 100° F.
